Ruby

My heart that had grown old,

Nothing more but a bloodred ruby,

Impenetrable, cold, useless to hold.

Trapped inside my priceless trophy.

Red swirls like a dreadful mist,

Concealed inside, the merciless beast,

What good do I hold in my bloodstained fist,

When it fed on my childhood, a splendid feast.

On the precious diamond door, I pound,

Enemies everywhere, the sky, the ground.

What solitude would I ever hope be found,

As I try to lose that murderous hound.

I flee down an unknown way,

The final hour is when I tire,
My soul it would touch and slay,
As evil smothered my inner fireâ€¦

End
